

No immediate plan however

Sewer agency may expand into Carmel Valley

IN THE NOT too distant future, Carmel Sanitary District may be inspecting septic tanks, running package treatment plants and—in some cases—installing sewer lines as far east as Carmel Valley Village.

The district board of directors has faced the expansion issue to some degree in the preparation of its Areawide Facilities Plan. That report, expected by next June, will deal with the sanitation needs of Carmel, Carmel Highlands and Carmel Valley.

The immediate reason for new discussion on expanding the district's boundaries is the Carmel Valley Ranch project. The developer, Landmark Lands Co. of Oklahoma, intends to install an on-site package sewage treatment plant to serve the 500 homes and 100-unit resort lodge proposed for the Mid-Valley property.

State and county water quality officials require that some government entity run the package plant. And everybody's favorite candidate is the Carmel Sanitary District.

THE ONLY BARRIER is the fact the district has a ban on annexations and has yet to get involved with satellite sewage treatment plants.

But attorney Donald Freeman, who represents the district, said it would only take time and a change in the district's ordinances to expand into services beyond the central treatment plant by the mouth of the Carmel River.

While board President Charlotte Hurst said the sanitary district could be accused of "empire building" if it took on more territory and responsibilities, she said the public would benefit by having a single agency regulate sewage for the entire Carmel and Carmel Valley area.

She also said the district board is nearly unanimous in its willingness to take on the problem.

"I believe the mantle has fallen on us," Mrs. Hurst said.

Freeman said the major hurdle would be rewriting the district's operating ordinances to give it responsibility over all aspects of sewage disposal in the Carmel area.

IF THE DISTRICT takes in these new areas without guaranteeing them sewer line connections to a central treatment plant, it "changes the concept of what the district has been doing in the past," Freeman said.

Now, for example, there are no formal inspections of septic tanks after they are installed unless they break the law by leaking raw sewage onto the surface of the ground.

A revamped sanitary district could take over inspection of septic tanks as part of its service, Freeman said.

The district also could annex and manage package sewer plants for Valley developments without imposing an extra burden on the central treatment plant, Freeman said. In some cases, he envisions treating the sewage at the main plant and piping effluent back to the development for disposal on land.

Freeman already has met with Michael Johnson, executive director of the Local Agency Formation Commission, District Engineer Kevin Walsh and district Business Manager Bud Bigelow about the possibility of annexing all the territory up to Mid-Valley.

Johnson wants the idea to wait until the Areawide Facilities Plan is ready. Freeman said the job of rewriting the district's service mandate could take six months from the time he starts.

As far as Carmel Valley Ranch is concerned, the developer has not yet applied to the district for annexation. While that is the solution preferred by health officials, the package plant there also could be run by the Monterey County Public Works Department through a county service area or new sanitation district.

Ernie Vossler, president of Carmel Valley Ranch, the Landmark Lands subsidiary developing the property, said he will leave the choice of agencies "to my engineer, public works and the public health department."

"It makes no difference as long as it pleases the supervisors, the planning commission and staff and we fulfill our commitment," he said. "I'm not in any hurry."

Walsh has had an opportunity to review the design specifications for the plant. The district wants the power to approve or reject the design so it meets district standards.

Since the district expects to inherit the plant in the future—even if it does not manage it from the start—Freeman said, "We don't want somebody else's problems."

Decision due on 14 lots in Robles

Three Robles del Rio subdivisions rejected because of their potential adverse impact on the congested Carmel Valley community will be appealed to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors on Dec. 12.

The three subdivision appeals were combined in one hearing at the request of Supervisor Sam Farr because of widespread public interest.

The three projects involved would create 14 new lots of Calle de los Agrinemsors at the southern end of Robles del Rio, a development south of Carmel Valley Village.

Coming up for appeal are the seven-unit Vista Robles major subdivision; the three-unit Loeffsky subdivision; and the four-unit Steele-Cooper subdivision.

Neighbors organized a group called the Robles Revolt to oppose the land divisions, claiming they would have an adverse effect on the water, road and fire protection systems for the pioneer Valley subdivision.

Motorist escapes injury

A 22-year-old Carmel Valley man escaped serious injury Monday when his car went off a 50-foot embankment on Carmel Valley Road after he swerved to avoid a deer on the road.

Christopher Scott Green suffered only a cut to his finger as he climbed out of the car following the accident. It happened at 2 a.m.

According to the California Highway Patrol, Green was driving eastbound in a light rainstorm just east of the Village when the deer appeared on the road.

In dodging the animal, Green's car went down the south slope embankment and onto Camp Steffani Road below. The car rolled over and came to rest on its wheels.

The CHP said Green was wearing his seat belt at the time of the accident.

New duty

DEPUTY RAY GEORGE (left) shakes hands with Monterey County Sheriff William A. "Jack" Davenport after George was named school resource officer for Carmel Unified School District. George, 32, of Pacific Grove, will be stationed at Carmel High School. He will work on campus to promote understanding between the sheriff's department and district students. George is an eight-year veteran of the department and a graduate of Golden Gate University with a master's degree in public administration. He begins the job Dec. 4.

Lights go on Dec. 1

The annual Carmel Valley Christmas tree lighting ceremony will take place Friday, Dec. 1 at 7 p.m. at the Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Department on Carmel Valley Road. All Carmel Valley residents are invited to attend.

Refreshments in the firehouse will follow the ceremony. Giving the official command to light the tree will be Bill Cook, a long-time resident of the Valley and owner of the property where the tree is located. Situated high on the south side of the Valley near Schulte Road, the tree is visible for several miles in each direction. The lighting has become a Christmas tradition for Valley residents. It is sponsored and maintained by Mid-Valley volunteer firemen.

Property owners association hires its first paid coordinator

Cindy Hall, a member of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association for the past two years, has been selected as the organization's first paid coordinator.

Mrs. Hall, 33, will direct volunteer efforts for the CVPOA and also make public statements at meetings of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors and Planning Commission.

The CVPOA board of directors decided this fall to hire a coordinator so the organization can lobby more effectively for controlled growth in the Valley. President Douglas Despard said he does not have time to handle all the volunteer efforts and appearances the office requires.

Mrs. Hall has worked in the past doing public relations for the Belmont Chamber of Commerce, as a volunteer in political campaigns and has been involved in the League of Women Voters.

She currently is employed by Macy's in Monterey.

A graduate of Ohio State University with a bachelor's degree in home economics education, she is married to Sherwood Hall and has two children.

She will receive $500 per month for 100 hours of work. Mrs. Hall said she hopes to improve the turnout of members at CVPOA meetings and, in public appearances, to promote a positive image for the group. She said the CVPOA has suffered by being identified as a negative organization against any growth in the Valley.

"I want to see us come out for something," she said.

Mrs. Hall said she is excited about starting the job with a new member on the board of supervisors, Barbara Shipnuck, a new water management district formed and a new Carmel Valley Master Plan being written.

CINDY HALL was confirmed last week as the first paid coordinator of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association. She will help direct volunteer activities and make appearances on behalf of the organization.

What in heck?

By AL EISNER

THOSE HORRIBLE TENNIS courts under construction at the old Holt Ranch at Mid-Valley have raised howls of protest from Carmel Valley residents. They are part of the Carmel Valley Ranch project that calls, eventually, for the construction of some 400 residential units and an additional 100 transient visitor units on the property.

The golf course, approved by the board of supervisors over strong protests, is under construction. Imagine the feelings of folks in Carmel Valley, when the ugly, black-topped tennis courts started to take shape right in the highly visible gently rolling hills near the river.

When the developers of the proposed Carmel Valley Ranch project won approval of their Specific Plan for the project, the plans showed tennis courts nestled alongside St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church behind a row of trees. At the hearing for final approval, members of the church protested that the noise of tennis playing would disturb their Sunday morning worship. The county allowed the courts to be moved to the east and that's where they are being built right now.

They are a permanent eyesore for Carmel Valley.

Our planners and supervisors were caught napping on this one. Perhaps they ought to be on the alert for other such problems from the developers, who are, after all, from Oklahoma, and aren't as sensitive to the land and its environs.

As Landmark Lands Co. carefully nursed the project through the approval stages, over continued protests from the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and hundreds of other Carmel Valley residents, we were continually assured that this was going to be a "quality project." Matter of fact, Supervisor Sam Farr, who voted in favor of the Specific Plan at an historic 1976 meeting, repeatedly stated that he favored the plan because it would set an example that would discourage tacky, piecemeal development of the rest of Carmel Valley. Some model!

LAST WEEK, we published an interview with the supervisor-elect from Salinas, Barbara Shipnuck. She was the surprise winner over Edwin Norris, the pro-development supervisor who once said at a public hearing that he would vote in favor of any proposed development in Carmel Valley, "except, maybe, a tanning factory."

Hopes are high that the headlong rush towards overdevelopment of Carmel Valley and the rest of the Carmel area will be slowed. With a new balance on the board, maybe out-of-town developers interested in nothing but the fast buck will be under closer control.

Maybe, perhaps, when the would-be developers of the Carmel Valley Ranch come forward with their specific proposals for the construction of the residential and resort units at Carmel Valley Ranch, the plans will be scrutinized carefully to see that the construction would cause little damage to the environment.

Maybe, also, the board will adopt a tougher stance if the developers attempt to weasel out of the tough conditions imposed on the development when it won approval.

Like a lot of other folks, I have problems deciphering and interpreting maps, plans and blueprints. I do have a much better grasp of a concept when I can see a scale model.

I think any group proposing a large development should be required to provide scale models of their plans so the public and the county can inspect them closely. These would be recorded for all time, so that any deviation from the plans would be noted immediately, thus avoiding a repetition of the tennis court disaster.

County Public Works Dept. announces

Only two road, transit projects planned for C.V.

ONLY TWO ROAD improvement and mass transit projects are planned in Carmel Valley during the next five years, according to the work program proposed through 1983 by the Monterey County Public Works Department.

The major project suggested for the Valley—extension of the four-lane section of Carmel Valley Road—is not mentioned in the plan because no method has been devised to finance it.

Public Works Director Bruce McClain suggests that a short addition from Via Petra to Valley Greens Drive at Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club be put in the five-year plan "if funds become available."

The full four-lane road from Via Petra to the Mid Valley Shopping Center is recommended by the Carmel Valley Master Plan Committee.

McClain told the Monterey County Planning Commission recently that if someone works out a method to pay for the project, he can put it in a five- or 10-year plan and start accumulating construction funds.

A major source of money for the road is expected to be from developers who subdivide property in Carmel Valley.

In the interim, the only projects McClain believes he has money for are a $10,000 contribution toward bus service to Carmel Valley Village from the Monterey Peninsula beginning next spring and resurfacing 1.18 miles of Carmel Valley Road between Valley Greens Drive and Schulte Road.

The resurfacing project would be similar to work done between Los Laureles Grade and the Village last summer. It would cost $328,000 in federal funds and is planned for 1981-82.

McClain also would like a county road maintenance yard in the Valley and wants it included in the five-year plan if there is money.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors must approve the plan before it takes effect. They have scheduled a hearing on the matter on Tuesday, Dec. 5 at 1:30 p.m. in their chambers, Church and Alisal, in Salinas.

Rural growth limit plan before supervisors Jan. 30

A proposal to put a 950-home lid on growth outside Monterey County cities in 1979 won't go to the board of supervisors for review until the new board takes office in January.

The supervisors set aside Tuesday, Jan. 30 at 3 p.m. for their hearing of the planning commission proposal for a 1 per cent interim growth limit.

The board's strongest growth management advocate, Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel, will be the chairman by then. And the most effective critic of Water company cannot obtain drilling rights

California-American Water Co. is having problems negotiating for two high-yield well sites in the Lower Carmel Valley.

As a result, it may have to file an environmental impact report on all four of its proposed wells in the vicinity. Three weeks ago, it appeared the utility might avoid preparing one.

Circumstances changed when Cal-Am was unable to get agreements for two well sites near Cypress Road, west of Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club. The sites are owned by an unidentified private individual. Cal-Am is looking for two alternate sites now to go along with other wells planned at the golf club and at Rancho Canada Golf Club.

The company must apply again for use permits on the new well sites. If the Monterey County Planning Commission again recommends an EIR for the wells, the county board of supervisors appears ready to uphold that decision.

Three weeks ago, Supervisors Michal Moore, Edwin Norris and Kenneth Blohm voted against requiring an EIR.

Supervisors Sam Farr and Dusan Petrovic wanted the study because Valley residents fear the wells will lower the water table and kill vegetation that anchors the Carmel River banks and retards erosion.

Moore was to meet with Cal-Am representatives and Ed Lee of the Lower Carmel Valley Advisory Committee to set conditions for pumping from the wells.

In the interim, Cal-Am had to switch well locations. At the same time, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board voted unanimously to request an EIR on the well proposal. Moore, chairman of the board, abstained from the vote. But he said later he may be ready to change his vote as a supervisor on the EIR issue.

"I'm not just representing myself," he said. "I'm also representing the (water) district."

Cal-Am wants the four wells so it can boost its total production to 22,000 acre-feet per year. The new wells, when pumped at capacity, would produce 5,000 acre-feet of water above and beyond the utility's current production.

Cal-Am spokesmen contend there is enough information available about the impact of the wells without going through the time-consuming and costly process of preparing an environmental report.

The issue goes back to the planning commission for a hearing next Wednesday.

21-0 shutout

Padres defeat Pacific Grove; win coveted 'Shoe'

By JAY POSNER

THE CARMEL HIGH School defense turned in its fourth shutout of the season as the Padres routed Pacific Grove High, 21-0, in a game played Saturday at Carmel.

The victory, Carmel's first against Pacific Grove since 1975, gives the Padres "The Shoe," the perpetual trophy which goes to the winner of the game every year. Carmel leads the series with 20 wins compared to 16 wins for Pacific Grove. There have been two ties.

Five minutes after the game, the Padres came back on the field to take a victory lap around the field with the Shoe. As the Padres made their way back to the locker room, they were congratulated by several Gonzales High School players.

The reason Gonzales players were there was that the Padre victory gave the Spartans and Hollister High School a tie with Pacific Grove for the Mission Trail Athletic League title. The MTAL Board of Managers met Sunday night and decided to send Gonzales to represent the league in the Region IV playoffs against Seaside High School, the Monterey Bay League champions, tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. at Gonzales. The other Region IV semifinal is Saturday at 1 p.m. at Salinas High School between Monterey and Aptos, the Santa Cruz County Athletic League champions. The two winners will meet Saturday, Dec. 2, at Salinas High at 1:30 p.m.

Padre head coach Frank Lynch said that the victory was a tribute to his coaching staff, which consists of John Whittaker, Tom Krebs, Jack Nycess, Dan Holman, Steve Hare and weight coach George duBet.

Carmel scored first with 1:58 left in the first half on a 2-yard plunge by Mike Odello on the 14th play of a 76-yard drive. The drive came after Carmel free safety John Lucido picked off a Ricky Vertz pass on the Padre 24.

The Padres scored again on the second play of the fourth quarter on Odello's second touchdown of the game, a 1-yard run. Lucido had his point-after kick blocked and the Padres led 13-0 with 11:39 remaining in the game. The score came one play after a 52-yard pass from Lucido to Mark Nottenkamper put the ball on the 1. Lucido had lined up at flanker, but he took a backward pass from quarterback Joe Limov and threw the ball 40 yards downfield to Nottenkamper, who was caught from behind by breaker safety Vertz.

Carmel scored on its next possession as the Padres drove 51 yards in 13 plays with the score coming on a 1-yard run by Dave Oliver, his first touchdown of the year. The Padres set up to kick the extra point, but the snap went to Lucido and he ran around left end for the two-point conversion. The score came with only 2:17 left in the game.

"Our defense was tremendous," Lynch said after the game. "It was the first time P.G. had been shut out all year, so we must have done something right."

Pacific Grove gained 184 yards on offense while the Padres racked up 232 yards of total offense. Lucido led the Carmel rushers with six carries for 45 yards while P.G. fullback Chris Shumway paced the Breakers with 52 yards on 16 carries.

Pacific Grove quarterback Vertz threw for 104 yards, but he was intercepted three times by the tough Padre secondary. Lucido, Cory Bliesner and Clay Santini grabbed the interceptions for Carmel.

When asked to sum up the Padre season, Lynch said, "I've worked with these seniors for the last three years and they're a tremendous group of kids. We had four tough losses (Carmel lost all four games by eight points or less), but we have a lot of juniors who will be coming back next year."

The Padre varsity finished in a tie for fourth place in the MTAL with a 4-3 record. Carmel's overall record was 6-4.

In the frosh-soph game, the Breakers defeated Carmel, 21-7. Matt Nottenkamper scored the touchdown for the Padres, who finished 2-5 in MTAL play and 3-6 overall.

IN GIRLS' tennis play, Aptos High School edged Carmel 4-3 in the Region IV final on Wednesday of last week at UC Santa Cruz. The MTAL champion Padres finished the season 9-1 in league play and 12-5 overall.

Aileen Kelly, the Padres No. 3 singles player, was the only Carmel player to win in singles, while the doubles teams of Dara Bernstein and Cindy Landis, and Laurie McGlochlin and Laura Tanous picked up wins in doubles for Carmel. McGlochlin and Tanous, who are both juniors, finished the season undefeated in 14 matches.

THE PADRE water polo team was defeated for the first two times this year in Central Coast Section tournament play last Saturday in San Jose, thus eliminating the Padres from further CCS play.

In Carmel's first game, the Padres were defeated 21-9 by Awalt High School. Art Strum led the Padres with six goals while Peter Kelly, Adam Sherburne and Tom Agan each scored once for Carmel.

In the Padres second match, Live Oak High School routed Carmel, 12-3. Kelly, Strum, and Mark Baldwin each scored one goal for the Padres.

Last Friday, the three MTAL coaches elected four Padres to the all-league squad.

Selected from Carmel were goalie Peter Dew, Adam Sherburne, Art Strum and Carl Bresk. Jeff Hogans, Peter Kelly and Mark Baldwin were all picked for honorable mention.

Carmel girls win championship

Carmel High School teams have won only two Central Coast Section titles in all sports competitions. The second was chalked up over the weekend when the frosh-soph girls' swim team placed ahead of 86 other schools to win the title in San Jose.

The Carmel squad won six events en route to a 122-107 finish ahead of Monte Vista High School, its nearest rival.

In the course of the meet, five girls combined to set two new section records. Three individuals and the 200 freestyle relay team set school records in the championship meet.

Sarah Hicks, Cindy Frost, Kira Garrett and Suzy Hermanson combined for the CCS record 2:00.4 time in the 200 medley relay.

Kerry Neill set an individual CCS record in the 50 freestyle with a 25.07 time.

Cindy Frost set Carmel High School records in the 50 breaststroke (33.1) and the 100 breaststroke (1:12.4).

The relay team of Kira Garrett, Suzy Hermanson, Sara Hicks and Kerry Neill set a Carmel record with a time of 1:45.08.

Divers Teresa DeAmarel and Amanda Mallory finished seventh and eleventh, respectively, in the championship.

Coach Bob Walthour said he concentrated on the frosh-soph division because so many of his top swimmers were in their first two years of high school. Only four Carmel girls swam in the varsity division.

"Our kids are number one," Walthour said. "Now they are looking forward to next year and the varsity competition."

The team ended the dual meet season undefeated, its 62-0 dual meet winning streak intact.

Walthour said the team banquet will be next Thursday at 6:30 p.m. in the Carmel High School cafeteria. Team and individual awards will be presented at the banquet.

UFM Arts, Crafts Fair this weekend

Handcrafted items will be displayed while musicians perform at the University For Man's Arts and Crafts Fair, Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 25-26 at the Custom House Plaza, Monterey. Hours for the free event are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day.

More than 70 artisans will display leather work, jewelry, pottery and art. Folk musicians will provide free entertainment.

Proceeds from the sale will benefit UFM, an independent, non-profit, educational organization on the Monterey Peninsula College campus.

Rural growth limit plan

growth controls, Supervisor Edwin Norris of Salinas, will be off the board, ousted in the Nov. 7 election by Barbara Shipnuck. Mrs. Shipnuck has said she favors some form of growth management.

The planning commission has recommended the interim growth limit while a full-scale growth management plan is adopted.

The framework of the plan was adopted by the supervisors in a policy statement in September. It calls for limited growth outside existing cities or urban service areas; protection of agricultural land; a ban on polluting industries; and a point system to determine which development projects will be approved in the unincorporated areas of the county.

The commission, in its unanimous recommendation to the board, asks for the money to turn the generalities of the policy into specifics of the county General Plan by the end of 1979.

The 1 per cent interim growth limit is based on the county's actual growth rate since 1970. Monterey County's total growth rate per year averages out to 3.03 per cent since 1970, but two-thirds of that occurred within the boundaries of incorporated cities, where county government has no jurisdiction.

by Lucy Smithson

FOR THE FOURTH year in a row, members of the Monterey Vaqueros, Corral 85 of Equestrian Trails Inc., are heading for Fort Hunter Liggett for the Thanksgiving weekend. They are joined on this four-day campout by members of Bakersfield Corral 59.

Trail riding is the main focus of the weekend. Sometimes the lessee of the federal grazing lands, Marcus Rudnick, invites the weekend cowboys to help him move cattle. Thanksgiving dinner is a potluck affair with each family bringing a complete meal to feed their own crew and setting all the food out on a shared picnic table. That adds up to more than "tasties" all around. That's "stuff-yourself-and-leftovers-tomorrow" all around.

Each year when plans are made, the same serious discussion starts as to where to camp. Up by the mission where certain civilized amenities are available? Or down by the river where it is beautiful but very, very cold?

Of course, it turns out that the hardy souls who are going for the long weekend all have self-contained campers with running water and electricity. Vic and Speedy Farr even have a TV. Thanksgiving dinner comes hot out of camper ovens.

Less well-equipped campers choose to show up on Friday or Saturday for a shorter weekend. And always a campfire is planned for the evenings.

To meet fire regulations, the campfire must be built in a barrel or other enclosure. And it has to be a big campfire to do any good. It has to be the kind of campfire that makes you walk stiff-legged after you've been standing next to it for a while. That's because one side of your pants are on fire while the other end of you is frozen.

In their planning, the regular campers always agree that there will be plenty of firewood in the river bottoms. "We'll just drag it up with the horses," one cowboy assures the others.

Well, dragging up firewood actually works for the ETI campers. That's because they do it all the time. Their horses are used to it and fit for it.

"I'VE LOGGED a lot of miles."

Along about this same time of year, 17 other cowboys elsewhere are going to get into a booger fit and a peck of trouble trying to drag up firewood when they don't know how, and their horses don't know how.

DRAGGING UP FIREWOOD is one of those equestrian events where you definitely have to be some kind of cowboy. At the very least, you have to have a Western saddle.

An English saddle is very nice for trail riding. But it is hard to dally a lariat full of firewood to its saddle horn.

The Western saddle used for dragging logs must be equipped with a breast collar to spread the weight out over a wider area of the horse. Also a flank girth for ditto reason. And the gear has got to fit and be in non-breakable condition.

A horse that feels a little dubious about a bundle of brush dragging behind him is going to feel a lot dubious if his saddle gouges him at the same time. He's also going to get a sore back and not be too cheerful about doing this firewood act again.

What happens if this dubious horse is doing his best to gimp along with his painful saddle and puzzling firewood and then something suddenly gives way? Why, it's spook city, sonny. Someone is in a heap of trouble. And he's probably not seated too firmly on that busted saddle—to where he can help things either.

Now for pulling firewood, you take your third best lariat—the one you don't mind getting wet and dirty—and latch it around a six-foot length of log. Pick a light log for starters. You'll actually have to get down and choose a lightweight one because logs can fool you if they're wet or of dense wood.

Wrap the rope end from the saddle horn over the front of the pommel and under your leg. The reason for this is that if the horse does a half turn in the wrong direction while the rope runs over your leg, why, you're just going to be a one-legged cowboy. And dally pardner; don't tie hard and fast.

Mount the horse when the rope is in position but slack. Do not try to lead a horse with a log fastened to the saddle horn. The saddle needs your weight in it to keep it from rising up.

Make your first drag on smooth flat ground with no obstacles to catch the leg and make it pull unevenly. Pull at least 100 feet straight ahead so the horse can get down into it with his neck and shoulders.

Start the horse off slightly turned toward the log on the rope side. This gives the horse a chance to see what's following him. Also, it straightens the log out for a straight-ahead pull.

DRAGGING LOGS PUTS muscle on a horse. Until the muscle builds up, take it easy. Over and over again, we keep telling people: don't ask more than a horse can give you. He'll just argue with you. And you can't win.

To keep that muscle building up easily, drag logs on both sides. That means you have to get used to holding the reins in either hand. Maybe it also means mounting from either right or left side.

Dragging up logs helps to settle a spooky horse. It's good experience for young horses, too. There gets to be fewer and fewer things that amaze a young horse when his rider expects him to work quietly dragging firewood up the trail.

Dragging up wood with a horse is about the only practical way of getting windfall branches into the woodpile. You saw them into six- or eight-foot lengths and drag them to a convenient place to chainsaw them into fireplace lengths.

Once you have a horse used to dragging firewood, you'll never struggle along with armfuls of wood again.

All-day program, discussion planned on geological hazards

New information and discoveries related to the geological hazards of the Monterey Bay Area will be discussed at an all-day program planned for Saturday, Jan. 27, at MPC.

Update: Geologic Hazards on the Central Coast will be sponsored by the Monterey Bay Geological Society in cooperation with the college. MPC geology instructors John Kingsley and Keith Simmons are coordinators of the program.

"A lot of new fault zones have been discovered recently and there is a lot of new information on ground response during earthquakes," Kingsley said. As Monterey is undergoing a surge of construction development it is important to be aware of the geologic hazards, he added.

Members of the panel will be Jerry Greene, marine geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey; Eric Dittmer, environmental geologist of the City of Salinas; Les Sternad, senior coastal planner with the California Coastal Commission, and Robert Olsen, executive director of the California Seismic Safety Commission.

Greene will speak on Seismic Hazards—Off-Shore Drilling in the Monterey Bay Area. Dittmer on Geological Hazards of Monterey County. Sternad on Seismic Safety Planning and the Coastal Commission; Olsen on Seismic Safety Implementation—A State Level Perspective.

The program will start at 9 a.m. and participants are asked to bring a bag lunch for the lunch break. Afternoon sessions will be held from 1:30 to 4 p.m. There will be an admission charge of $2 to cover expenses and refreshments. Further information on the program is available by contacting Kingsley, 649-1150, ext. 236.

18-mile bicycle ride Saturday for Sierra Club

A leisurely 18-mile bicycle ride along the coastline of the Monterey Peninsula is on the outing calendar of the local Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club Saturday, Nov. 25. Members of other chapters and non-members are welcome to join the free excursion.

Riders will meet at 9 a.m. on the Coast Guard Pier in Monterey. The excursion will continue along Cannery Row to Bird Rock in the Del Monte Forest and return to the pier.

The Rancho Bonita development will be considered at 10:40 a.m. The developer, Roglar Associates of Seaside, wants to create 10 one-acre parcels on 10 acres east of the Valley Hills shopping area, near Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club.

The property borders the Carmel River on the south side of Carmel Valley Road. It is now in agricultural use. It lies just east of the proposed 73-unit Valley Hills subdivision.

mission will review the preliminary subdivision map for the Rancho del Sol subdivision on the open hills just north of Garland Ranch Regional Park.

The development proposes 20 lots ranging from 1.3 acres to 2.4 acres on 125.5 acres of land between Los Laureles Grade and Carmel Valley Road.

10 km. race Sunday a.m. at Garland Park

Runners searching for a way to melt off the calories after Thanksgiving dinner can look forward to a tough race through Garland Ranch Regional Park in Carmel Valley on Sunday, Nov. 26.

The West Valley Track Club will sponsor a 10-kilometer, AAU-sanctioned race through the park on Carmel Valley Road, 10 miles east of Highway 1.

According to real estate broker Skip Marquard, one of the race organizers, the winding course will take runners along the lower loop trail on the park, up 600 feet to the park mesa and back down to Carmel Valley Road for the finish.

Registration for the race is from 9:30 to 10 a.m. at the park information office. There is a fee of $2.50 per runner, with ribbons going to all finishers and T-shirts to 22 winners in eight race divisions.
